

Fixes:

- applies to all reader panes with right-click context:
1. Click-dragging/"Selecting" text on one side should select, in real-time in parallel, the corresponding text on the other language's side; in this case, I began selecting, "quesumus, Domine," which should select the English words ("We beseech You, O Lord": quesumus = 3rd pers. plur. ind. act "We beseech" & "Domine," vocative, "O Lord," with substantively presumed "Thee/You")
 - what would it take to add a Latin 'linguistic translation & analysis module' such that instead of selecting atomic words that correspond roughly, we can select morpheme by morpheme and explain the construct and rationale grammatically & stylistically according to Latin grammar and Ecclesiastical Latin specific usage?
 2. The selected phrase in the search results needs to also emphasize in ITALICS and BOLD, plus tasteful highlighter marker effect, for useability, and user experience...
 3. The other language, in this case "We beseech You, O Lord" needs to accompany the Vulgate, in the lighter, de-emphasized italicized "other language" font beneath and slightly indented (Same for the "Commemoratio Secreta / Secret")
